Windows Vista Error Code 104| I have tried both operating systems for a number of years and prefer Windows Vista. I was looking in various places online for info on possible solutions to my symptoms and came across a site that claimed to fix the problem after a clean install of Windows. I was sure I would like to try this but it appeared the download for this link was very old (before I discovered the link was dead) so I tried doing a clean install of Windows Vista Home Premium with the iso file. I had used this link: For some reason I couldn't open the setup in Windows and the.exe file appeared to be corrupted. I tried using Windows DVD Maker but that didn't work either. I was very disappointed and hoping the
